2) Incorporate and highlight information from the State of the Watershed Report into RFC's Watershed Exploration Series and high school student programs

Since 1997, Roaring Fork Conservancy has conducted education programs with students throughout the Roaring Fork Valley for a total of over 54,000 adults and students. Educators teach students about the ecological, chemical, physical, and cultural significance of local riparian areas and water issues. All of Roaring Fork Conservancy's education programs help teachers and students meet Colorado science, geography, social studies, history, mathematics, and reading and writing standards through scientific investigation, hands-on discovery, and outdoor exploration. Committed to a watershed-wide approach to education, Roaring Fork Conservancy works with over 25 school and civic groups from Aspen to Glenwood Springs. Below is a list of Roaring Fork Conservancy programs where the State of the Watershed Report was used in planning the program curriculum and/or delivering the program content to participants.

Watershed Information Now More Accessible To Your Fingertips

Roaring Fork Watershed information just became even more accessible to your fingertips. The full 500-page State of the Roaring Fork Watershed Report is now available in paper form at all public and high school libraries from Aspen to Glenwood Springs. Many people have requested access to a paper copy since the report contains such a volume of information. Thanks to a recent grant from the Colorado Healthy Rivers Fund, high school students and teachers throughout the valley now have access to this valuable resource for science, social studies and geography classes. Of course, the full report and the 32-page executive summary, as well as information on the Roaring Fork Watershed planning process, are always available online at www.roaringfork.org/watershedplan. There is also a limited supply still available for the purchase price of $100.

Roaring Fork Conservancy is the community-supported watershed conservation organization for the Roaring Fork Valley that brings people together to protect our rivers. Celebrating over ten years of watershed conservation, Roaring Fork Conservancy focuses on keeping water in our rivers, keeping our rivers healthy, and keeping our riparian habitat intact. For more information call 927-1290 or visit www.roaringfork.org.

Task 2: Enhancing Public Interaction

Five public meetings were held in the Fall of 2009 to gather input on draft watershed plan recommended actions. The meetings were geographically distributed throughout the watershed. Each meeting focused on one or two sub-watersheds. After a presentation describing the status of water resources in that area, meeting attendees participated in a topic area group (water quantity, water quality, regional water management, riparian and instream or climate change) of their choosing. Each group was led by a technical expert and had large format maps and draft water topic goals and objectives to discuss. Notes were taken for each group and this information was presented back to the entire group. The notes were compiled in excel spreadsheets by water topic and provided the basis for drafting corresponding recommended actions.

Phase II Watershed Plan Public Input Meetings

Location	Town	Sub-watershed	Date	Attendees

1) Designing and producing large format posters and maps for use in public meetings, window displays, and public buildings

Large format maps of each of the nine sub-watersheds were produced and displayed at the five Phase II Watershed Plan Public Input Meetings. The maps portrayed riparian and instream habitat condition, water quality sites that exceeded water quality standards, and flow altered sites overlaid on a topographic map. Large format watershed-scale maps were also made showing water quality and flow alteration and used at the meetings. These maps were produced by the Colorado River Water Conservation District as an in-kind donation.

Large format maps displayed at public meetings.

We also created a 4-page newspaper insert that was modified for display at the RFC office, in public buildings, and at the public meetings. The insert was reprinted and available at the public meetings.

Get Involved in Your Water Future

Roaring Fork Watershed Plan

Now is the time to get involved in planning for our water future. A collaborative effort of more than 60 federal, state, county, and local agencies, organizations and citizens are working to create a comprehensive guide to the Roaring Fork Watershed. The Roaring Fork Watershed Collaborative needs citizen input to make this the best plan possible. This publication highlights some of the work done to date on the plan and encourages everyone to get involved in local meetings about their areas of the watershed.

The best protection of western Colorado water is an educated public.
We encourage you to learn more and get involved.

Ultimately, the Watershed Plan's success depends on comprehensive input from all stakeholders including landowners, public citizens, land use planners, resource professionals, and decision makers. To ensure relevancy, the plan will include a structure for continued input from and dialogue between all stakeholders, and will address their needs through clearly-stated objectives.

Phase I

- ☒ Gather stakeholders
- ☒ Complete State of Watershed Report

Phase II

- ☐ Develop strategies and recommendations
- ☐ Complete Watershed Plan

Other benefits of a watershed plan include:

- Improved community understanding of watershed issues
- Efficient use of time and money
- Minimization of duplicative work
- Increased communication between local and regional water interests
- Encouragement of partnerships
- Protection of water resources and economy
- Increased collaboration on projects and public outreach

Roaring Fork Watershed

2) Organizing one or more field trips with public officials and technical experts.

Roaring Fork Conservancy organized and hosted a very successful Roaring Fork Watershed Summit on June 10, 2010. Planned as a "Floating Summit," peak flows stranded the nearly 80 elected officials, agency staff, and water experts who had come together to discuss critical water issues in the Roaring Fork Watershed. The day began with House Representative Kathleen Curry addressing the crowd and answering questions. Then discussion continued in break out 'boat' groups and then following lunch, an address by Ruedi Water and Power Authority's Executive Director Mark Fuller, and the day was wrapped up by 2010 River Conservator and Pitkin County Commissioner, Rachel Richards. Resolutions adopted by the watershed's counties and municipalities in support of the ongoing Roaring Fork Watershed planning process were presented at the summit. The issues and solutions discussed were added to the greater effort of creating the Roaring Fork Watershed Plan, a document that will be used to help make critical water related decisions.

RESOLUTION IN SUPPORT OF THE ROARING FORK WATERSHED PLAN

Whereas, water is a critical natural resource to the environmental, social and economic well-being of the Roaring Fork Watershed, and

Whereas, a collaboration of local governments, government agencies, non-profits, associations, and citizens have come together to form the Roaring Fork Watershed Collaborative Water Group, and

Whereas, this collaboration has undertaken the writing of the Roaring Fork Watershed Plan, and

Whereas, the Ruedi Water and Power Authority (RWAPA) is the sponsor of the Roaring Fork Watershed Plan, and

Whereas, the Municipal and County governments in the Roaring Fork Valley are members and supporters of the Ruedi Water and Power Authority, and

Whereas, RWAPA and Roaring Fork Conservancy have been working diligently on the Roaring Fork Watershed Plan since 2008 and have completed Phase I of the Plan, the State of the Watershed Report, and

Whereas, RWAPA and Roaring Fork Conservancy are currently in the midst of Phase II of the Plan which will produce recommendations for future water management in the Roaring Fork Valley, and

Whereas, the Plan has engaged and involved hundreds of citizens of the Roaring Fork Valley through many meetings, presentations and other activities publicizing the Plan and soliciting contributions to and discussions of the Plan and,

Whereas, those efforts have resulted in broad support for the planning process and significant and extensive public input into the Plan, and

Whereas, the local governments and agencies with responsibility for water management, treatment, delivery, development and conservation wish to formally endorse the concepts of resource sustainability, environmental quality, public safety, recreational value and aesthetic appeal that are the objectives of the Plan,

Therefore, Let It Be Resolved

That the (County Commissioners, City Council, Board, etc.) of (Jurisdiction Name Here) hereby express their support for the watershed planning process and their intent to thoughtfully consider the recommendations of the Plan and to adopt those recommendations which they may find appropriate, feasible and beneficial to their respective communities and the watershed as a whole.

A RESOLUTION SIMILAR TO THE ONE ABOVE WAS ADOPTED BY THE FOLLOWING:

Aspen City Council	May 24, 2010	Garfield County	May 17, 2010
Basalt Town Council	April 27, 2010	Glenwood Springs City Council	May 20, 2010
Carbondale Town Council	May 18, 2010	Pitkin County	May 26, 2010
Eagle County	May 18, 2010	Snowmass Village Town Council	May 3, 2010

Additionally eight presentations on the Watershed Plan were given to the elected officials and boards to inform them of the status of the plan and solicit feedback.

3) Increasing opportunities for the public to interact with technical experts.

In an ongoing effort to increase public awareness and interaction, Roaring Fork Conservancy has spearheaded the following:

- October Water Month
- Western Water Crisis panel discussion
- Water presentations to civic groups and town councils and board of county commissioners
- Voter's Guide to Water Issues

October Water Month

Colorado River Month was a huge success. With 17 events and nearly 20 different organizations and/or individuals, approximately 500 people participated throughout the month. This does not include the number of people who read newspaper articles, heard radio pieces, looked at the web, and other indirect methods of education. Therefore, the numbers of people influenced was actually much greater.

Roaring Fork Conservancy has declared October 2010 Colorado River Month in the Roaring Fork Watershed. We are capitalizing on the many community events focused on the Colorado River that are occurring all during the month of October. With a combined effort of many organizations, we hope to raise awareness that our rivers are vulnerable and need to be protected.

The Colorado River system supports 30 million people in seven US states and Mexico. As an important headwaters watershed to the Colorado, the Roaring Fork contributes 5% of the annual flow the Colorado River. Roaring Fork Conservancy is raising awareness about our role in the bigger watershed picture.

Upcoming events include:

Western Water Crisis Panel Discussion

On October 16, 2010 Eric Kuhn of the Colorado River District, water attorney Peter Nichols and author Jonathan Waterman discussed threats and solutions to the Western Water Crisis on the Colorado River at a panel discussion in Carbondale hosted by Roaring Fork Conservancy and the Roaring Fork Cultural Council. They discussed the following topics:

- The general water situation-transmountain diversions, consumptive and non-consumptive water uses.
- Background/history of how we got to where we are today?
- The river as a living resource.
- The current predicted shortfall.
- Current sources of water to meet this shortfall and the amount of water that can be expected, and the issues associated with each source.
- Thoughts about our water future? What should people be thinking about/doing?

Water Presentations to Civic Groups and Elected Officials

Education and outreach was one of four general topic areas (policy and regulatory; collaboration and coordination; and research) that consistently emerged from the five recent Phase II Roaring Fork Watershed Plan public meetings. As one break-out group noted “Educational efforts need to expand beyond “easy” issues; education must address complex water policy issues and transmountain diversions”. Targeted education and outreach efforts also need to change the culture of our relationship to water. Bob Schultz, the meeting facilitator articulated this: point “After experiencing three of these input sessions and listening to the dialogue, I have come to understand that we are really talking about changing the culture of our relationship to water in the region. We can propose some regulatory changes that could have some impact, but the real change will be based on people having a different relationship with water and a culture of water responsibility becoming part of our regional ethic. That cannot be mandated.”

To this end, Ken Neubecker worked with RFC staff to develop .5 to 1.5 hour PowerPoint presentations to increase public awareness and involvement on water resource topics. Ken Neubecker is the past President of Colorado Trout Unlimited, the Environmental Representative on the Colorado River Basin Roundtable, co-chair of the Non-Consumptive Needs Assessment sub-committee, and on the Governor’s Forest Health Advisory Council. He was involved with the Statewide Water Supply Initiative (SWSI).

Ken’s presentation discusses the west’s arid climate and the geography of water supply and population in the west. The talks present information on the history of water development in Colorado and the uncertain future we face with increasing demands and a shrinking supply.

Voter's Guide

Since water issues quickly become complex in Colorado, knowledgeable voters are critical to protecting our water resources. Roaring Fork Conservancy asked candidates in local county commissioners and local House and Senate races for their responses to the following questions.

- What are the water related threats, issues, or concerns in the Roaring Fork Watershed that affect your sphere of influence or concern you the most? What are some solutions to these threats, issues or concerns?
- What most needs to happen to create a unified voice for the Roaring Fork Watershed?

All but one candidate responded to these questions. Our goal was to present a non-biased forum for candidates to express their qualifications and platforms on water issues affecting the Roaring Fork Watershed and the state of Colorado. Roaring Fork Conservancy did not endorse any of the candidates and presented the responses un-edited in its Voters' Guide. We printed 1,000 copies of the Guide. The Voters' Guide was available at many coffee shops and public buildings throughout the watershed and online at www.roaringfork.org/vote.
