Watershed Restoration Programs

John W. Hickenlooper
Governor

DNR Executive Director

Jennifer L. Gimbel
CWCB Director

Background

The CWCB Watershed Protection/Restoration Program (Program) is designed to facilitate the planning, design, implementation, monitoring, and reporting of projects that protect and/or improve non-consumptive and consumptive uses of water. These multi-objective projects are designed to reduce flood hazards, stabilize stream channels, provide habitat, reduce erosion, and increase the capacity of use water. This is achieved through technical assistance and project funding through competitive grant processes. Watershed groups, or assemblages of stakeholders that live and work within a watershed, often need help strategizing an approach to implement projects. The CWCB offers several grant programs that provide direct assistance to these groups. They include the Colorado Watershed Restoration Program (est. Sept. 2008), the Colorado Healthy Rivers Fund, the Fish and Wildlife Resources Fund, and the Water Supply Reserve Account. Since 2008, the CWCB has contributed over $16 million to plan and implement projects benefiting non-consumptive water use (project list attached). Most of these projects have a direct or indirect benefit for consumptive water use as well.

Discussion

Staff will briefly update the Board on the status of Program. This will include discussion of project strategies, funding sources, and continued project monitoring through partnerships. The Hartland Diversion Dam Reconstruction will be presented as a project that has direct benefits for non-consumptive and consumptive uses of water.
