Description: Next Generation Water Leaders Program
River Science will expand the reach of their existing water education for junior and senior-level high-school students from the Arkansas Basin to eight school districts in Southwest Colorado. Building on the 30-year success of River Watch's water quality education statewide, high school teachers will be trained in locally tailored curriculum designed to give students a foundational knowledge of water quality and water quantity, build student skill sets, provide student experiences, and spark interest in water-related careers. This curriculum is already approved through Career Development Incentive Program (CDIP) and certifies students in water-related workforce skills.
As a part of this agreement, please refer to Exhibit A and B (dated 5/15/23) for a complete Statement of Work and Budget.
