Re: Need for State Mine Reclamation Permit, File No. M-2019-003

Dear Landowner:

The Colorado Division of Reclamation, Mining and Safety (Division) has specific Rules and Regulations for the Extraction of Construction Materials, adopted by the Colorado Mined Land Reclamation Board in August 2006. These rules are in accordance with the Colorado Land Reclamation Act for the Extraction of Construction Materials (Title 34 Article 32.5). It has come to the attention of the Division that you may be conducting mining operations on your land requires a mine reclamation permit. The Division has assigned permit ID number M-2019-003 to this operation. Please reference this Permit ID number on any correspondence you submit to the Division.

As defined in the Act (34-32.5-103(13)), "mining operation" means the development or extraction of a construction material from its natural occurrences on affected land. The term includes, but is not limited to, open mining and surface operation. The term also includes transportation and processing operations on affected land. These activities would need an approved mine reclamation permit with the Division.

As defined in the Act (34-32.5-110), Any person desiring to conduct mining operations, prior to commencement of mining, shall file with the office, on a form approved by the board, an application for a permit to conduct mining operations. There are two categories: 110c – for operations on less than ten acres; or a 112c for operations affecting 10 acres or more.

If you have any questions, you may contact me at the Division of Reclamation, Mining and Safety at 1313 Sherman Street, Room 215, Denver, CO 80203, by telephone at 303-866-3567, ext. 8169, or by email at tim.cazier@state.co.us.
