As a result, the number of people who are not covered by health insurance is increasing. In 1999, 10.5 million people were not covered by health insurance, up from 9.5 million in 1998. This is a significant increase, especially considering that the total population of the United States is growing. The increase in the number of people without health insurance is a major concern for the government and the public. It is a challenge that needs to be addressed to ensure that everyone has access to health care.
